NEW STAFF UPDATES

INTRODUCING:

Shaya was born in Manhattan, New York to Argentinian parents. She eventually moved to Fredericksburg, Virginia where she graduated from Chancellor High School in 2016. Shaya is currently a senior at Virginia Commonwealth University on a pre-law track as a Political Science major. In her free time, she likes to paint and start new craft projects. She is looking forward to Legal Aid Works being the first step in her career of helping those facing poverty and the hardships that come with it.

Shaya Mondillo, Part-time bilingual housing paralegal

Fun fact: Shaya's role was funded in part by a grant allocated to LAW from IKEA! You can personally welcome Shaya to the team by emailing her at smondillo@legalaidworks.org

In response to a question on our annual performance evaluation which asked for a major accomplishment in the past year, our intake specialist Michelle said, "I feel the best major accomplishment is working from home and realizing that you can still advocate from your kitchen table, and it doesn't matter where you sit, it's where your heart is."

WHEN YOU WORK FOR LEGAL AID WORKS® (LAW) YOU HELP REAL PEOPLE IN NEED:

At LAW, we champion fairness for clients like "Laura."

After an abusive relationship, Laura obtained a two-year protective order against her abuser, "Donald", in 2017. In 2019, she had received subtle communications from the abuser, indicating that he was waiting for the expiration of the protective order, implying that he would resume the abuse when she no longer was protected by the protective order. During those two years, Donald was in and out of jail, including a rape charge involving another woman. A Legal Aid Works attorney patiently assisted Laura in navigating the process for requesting an extension of the previous protective order. After numerous postponements and delays (some related to lack of service on Donald, and some related to the pandemic), the Legal Aid Works attorney was able to convince a judge in November of 2020 to extend the protective order for another year.
